

DIALOGUE 27. The respective merits of frogs and rabbits

([r] run)

ROGER: My rabbit can roar like a rhinoceros.

BARRY: Rubbish! Rabbits don't roar, Roger.

ROGER: You're wrong, Barry. My rabbit's an Arabian rabbit. They're very rare. When he's angry he races round and round his rabbit run. And if he's in a real rage he rushes on to the roof and roars.

BARRY: How horrid! Really, I prefer my frog. I've christened him Fred.

ROGER: Freddie Frog! How ridiculous!

BARRY: An abbreviation for Frederick. Well, you remember when I rescued him from the river last February? He was crying like a canary. He was drowning.

ROGER: Really, Barry! Frogs don't drown.
