Some students asked me whether watching English TV soap opera can improve their English. Honestly, I am not so sure, but the only thing I can guarantee is that you can read Chinese much faster if the Chinese subtitle is on. The ways I learn English are; by reading more newspaper, novels, and more importantly, listening to speeches of some great people in history. The book “The Most Influential and Best Inspirational Voices” contains 19 inspiring and stimulating speeches. Speakers include: President Barack Hussein Obama, Larry Page (the founder of Google) and my favourite well-known human right fighter Martin Luther King, Jr. His speech, “I have a Dream” not only strengthens all black people in the 60s, but also echoes in my heart. He had a dream that “My four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the colour of their skin, but by the content of their character.” Although he, who was only 39, was assassinated in 1968, he created one of the greatest American dreams. That is really a dream in his age but what he had never imagined is that the President of the United States, Barack Hussein Obama, is the first black president of the United States. With faith, “we will be able to hew out of the mountain of despair a stone of hope.”

Other amazing, motivating, and powerful speeches include “This I Believe.” by Bill Gates, “We Choose to go to the Moon.” by John Fitzgerald Kennedy, etc. The book comes with the recordings of all speeches with normal and slow speed, which you can read the speech while you are listening to them.

Enjoy your reading.
